No. 15

from Parkside Lodge: Enjoy Your Summer!

FROM THE EAST

The aim of Freemasonry is to "make good men better". We do this by fostering personal growth in an atmosphere that enables us to expand our knowledge and improve our social skills of interactivity. We learn these valuable lessons from other men of good faith.

Freemasonry provides opportunities for fellowship, mentorship, and self-improvement. We encourage men to reflect on their actions while striving for continuous development.

And to make good men better, we highlight the significance of Masonic education, fraternity, and the moral lessons of the degrees. The sum of these parts adds to our individual development and promotes a deeper appreciation of the lessons of Freemasonry that encourage meaningful interaction among our members.

The foundation of being good men involves qualities such as loyalty, empathy, and the ability to control emotions. Good men aren't perfect. We acknowledge our flaws and work towards improvement. We are committed to support our families and communities by demonstrating strength of character with vulnerability and resilience.

Remember the Benefits of Brotherhood!

Chaplain: Interchangeable Parts

There's reference to a joke as anecdote about a "famous axe" whose handle & head were replaced multiple times and attributed to Lincoln:

A farmer claimed possession of young Abraham Lincoln's axe used to split logs and to make a living. The farmer said the axe had been passed down to him through the generations.

Why did the farmer make the claim? Perhaps...

1. To debate the changing or unchanging nature of a common item that's maintained with interchangeable parts.
2. To re-connect us to the memory of a beloved President.
3. To artfully transform a common tool into a precious historic artifact and thereby increase its saleable value.

It is not the object of this message to pronounce a solution. It is to ask you the question:

- What value do you place on the farmer's axe?

Enjoy the life God's given you!
